DAUSS WAS NICE AND SOFT FOR A'S

Detroit Pitcher's Delivery Just Suited Champs, Who Peppered It at Will

Plank, Who Didn't Feel Like Pitching, Quit in Second---Then Pennock Stopped Run-Amassing

Special to The Inquirer.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 17.—George Dauss had only a "round house" this afternoon and had no control of that. In the five innings he decorated the mounds at Navin Field the world's champions frisked him for five singles and two doubles, not to mention three free tickets and a sacrifice, and hung up seven runs. In the eighth they took another from Miller Main, making the final count 8 to 2 in their favor.

Manager Connie started Plank, but the veteran, being under contract not to work when he don't feel like it, was withdrawn at the end of the second chapter. The Tigers had made three runs and were swinging their war clubs in a fashion that would have registered more but for some fine and dandy fielding by Plank's support.

The Tigers were off form in more ways than in pitching, rendering the going very easy for the invading army. Veach failed to get under two boots by Rube Oldring that went so high that a lane duck might to have beaten them to the landing place. They went for doubles and manufactured three runs between them. Moriarty got himself a vacation through a malfeasance of his own. In the sixth inning Murphy had gained the second base by watchful waiting and a grounder by Barry, and concluded to steal third. Del Baker's throw had him beaten forty feet. Moriarty was some fifteen feet inside the diamond. He dropped the ball and picked it up again before Murphy arrived. Murphy hit the dirt and Moriarty essayed to rub the pill on him as he scidded to the sack. But Ump Egan said he didn't do it. Moriarty thought it over a while, strolled toward Egan, who had returned to the vicinity of second sack and began an oration. Egan was very patient. Bush and other Tigers headed Morry off, but Moriarty talked over their heads until he was ordered to retire.

The Macks were at top form in the field. Barry, Collins and McInnis in particular performing deeds worthy of commendation. Barry probably turned the whole tide of the game with a wonderful stop in the second inning. The Tigers were maltreating Plank in disregard of all rules of war, having sent over two runs in the first inning and another in the second, the latter on a double by Burns and a one-base wallop by Moriarty which, by the way, would have been a double but for the sprynese of Robe Oldring in left garden. Del Baker moved Moriarty along with a sacrifice and Dauss poke-bed the ball for a single. It hopped over the center of the mound pillow but Barry descended upon it like a greyhound and got it over to first before McInnis could get to the bag. Moriarty, apparently certain that the ball had gone safe, was scooting for the plate when Umpire Egan shouted the unwelcome tidings, adding that he'd play with the ball if it had to ladies' aid.

Captain George Von Bush fielded one another sweet infield play some in the seventh inning when Moriarty walked and Del Baker rapped the ball to Collins. It was an exceedingly difficult one, but Collins forced Kavanagh and Barry got the ball back to McInnis in time to nip Baker by a hair's breadth.

The Detroit runs all were made off Plank, the two in the opening round being manufactured by Kavanagh, Cobb, the former walking and profiting by a passed ball and Cobb's only hit of the day. Cobb himself taking second when Oldring juggled his hit. Moriarty then sent a jogging bome when Crawford hit the ball so far Murphy had to go almost out of sight to catch it.

Pennock entered the sketch in the third inning and let only five Tigers visit McInnis. Only one of these reached second.

The Macks, as said, were much handier with their sticks. Murphy banged one of Dums' first offerings into right for two sacks and went another block on Barry's sacrifice. A fielder's choice sent him home, Bush electing to throw to the plate on Collins' grounder and losing later.

Murphy was responsible for the second run also, opening the third round with a drive to left garden. He stole second, drawing a bad throw from Baker on which he continued to third. After Barry had popped, Collins rescued his pal with a roller to short which was so slow Bush had no chance to throw home. Collins was out by no an eyelash.

In the fourth, with one down, Strunk walked and Oldring singled past second. Lapp's grounder moved both men up and with Pennock at bat and two strikes registered against him it looked like all out. But the next grounder Dauss poked to first hit a hummock and bounded over Burns into right field, scoring both runners.

A pass opened the doings of the fifth inning also. Collins drew it. Baker helped with a single, and McInnis with a grounder to Veit, forcing Baker. The combination sending Collins around. Strunk's single put Stuffy on second and Oldring's double put them both over the plate.

In the eighth Oldring doubled again and got around on grounders by Lapp and Pennock.

CHEROKEE CHUCKER PAINTS PIRATES

Ben Tincup Hangs Up Shutout Over Pittsburgh After Phillies' Bats Pummel Bob Harmon for 6 to 3 Victory in Opening Clash

BY JIM NASIUM

The Phils utilized a double-header with the Pirates yesterday for the purpose of hopping into fifth place, grabbing the first encounter in a 6 to 3 finish and obtaining a 2 to 0 triumph in the final fuss of the afternoon.

There's a reason for everything. The reason for the first Phil triumph of the afternoon was a mobilization of Phil blows against Bob Harmon in three periods of his time when they amassed eight of their nine clouts, while Eddie Mattis, on, who was thrown into the breach to relieve Elmer Jacobs with the score tied, two on and two out, in the fourth, held the enemy to four scattered smacks that yielded but one run thereafter.

The secret of the second triumph, which is getting to be our idea of no secret at all, is that Ben Tincup, the Cherokee chucker, is a rising young pitcher who permits few ball clubs to get fresh with his delivery. Yesterday the Muskogee Medicine Man kept six Pirate hits so busily disconnected through the fuss that but two men who hit safely succeeded in advancing a base, and one of these progressed on an out at first, while the other one filched his way. Of the eight Pirates who reached first, six were left, one was caught napping and the remaining one doubled up with a pal. Opposed to Tincup, George McQuillan, Phillie old associates to five safe blows but he committed the fatal error of permitting Fred Luderus, the Milwaukee masher, to hitch a two-base wallop onto the tail end of a pair of bases on balls in the sixth, and this one blow served to amass both Phil tallies and settle the fuss.

"Ludy" was playing his first engagement since his injury at the start of the last Western trip, and on his first time at bat he whaled the missile over the right field wall foul by inches and then walked, while on his third trip to the plate he mauled in all the runs the Phils managed to get, with a double to the right field wall by Stock and then Whitey Alperman's record of three two-base hits and three passes out of seven trips to the plate.

Mattison Helps in First Game

By Jim Nasium

Bob Harmon got nothing with which to farther than the Phillies' dugout yesterday afternoon, but he was struggling in such heartbreaking gestures toward Elmer Jacobs, Phillie pitcher, that he was unable to get the ball over the plate with any degree of speed.

With Jake Pfeffer in the scoring book Jacobs crashed breaking into a flurry of Phil blows that started him two in the box. Mattis, on, who was thrown into the breach to relieve Elmer Jacobs with the score tied, two on and two out, in the fourth, held the enemy to four scattered smacks that yielded but one run thereafter.

Then Bob held the Phils to one safe blow in the fifth inning, which was the only time the visitors got as far as second base. The Phils a tally in the fourth without the necessity of a hit. Stock walked and Whitey Alperman forced Stock, and Oakes sacrificed Alperman to second. They scampered home on Luderus' double to right field, which Mowrey whacked a long hit to right that scored Wagner and Luderus. Dooin's single to center Carey walked, putting Luderus on second and Dooin on first. Mattison then got Stalls for the third out.

The Phillies' third and final tally, the only one of the game that was earned, was registered in the fifth inning when Carey drew a free ride to the good seats when Wagner hooked a third strike. Dooin's single to center advanced Carey to second, and Mattison followed suit to first to catch Jack Coombs' grounder on Dooin's trip around the plate.

The Phils' sixth uncorked a vicious assault on the staff of Jack Coombs, Pirate baseball, which looked enough like a hit that all Mattison's single to left that advanced Dooin to second. Stalls' grounder to Mowrey forced Dooin at third, and Oakes' single to center Carey, who on the throw-in was tagged at the plate by Gibson, who had relieved Coombs in the box. Mattison was trying to score on the play, but was nailed at the plate by Gibson.

Fate of Fray Is Decided in Sixth

By Jim Nasium

Theron and McQuillan became enmeshed in a pitching duel in the second game, which the Phillies finally won, but they had edged after an hour and a half of fast baseball, which was featured by the fact that neither pitcher was given any support by his mates on the bases, except occasionally when he was batting. Two of these errors resulted in runs being hit safely, while the other two were responsible for runs being registered on the part of the Phils.

Theron was the first to weaken, which made the fourth time around the circuit for him, and Mowrey was substituted for Wagner. Mowrey was batted for in the eighth inning by Whitey Alperman, who was batting for Stock, who was batting for Oakes, who was batting for Mowrey, who was batting for Wagner, who was batting for Theron, who was batting for Fray
