Hazards of Baseball
Casualty List Long
Players Brittle
Bert Bell Explains
Running the Century

By Perry Lewis

BASEBALL'S current casualty count suggests that the national game involves more physical hazards than football or other forms of competition based almost entirely upon body contact. Either that or the modern ball player is brittle.

When players collide bones are broken or one, perhaps both, are knocked unconscious. A crack outfielder falls in attempting a difficult catch and comes up with a dislocated shoulder. Another snaps an ankle bone sliding into a base, and here we have Dizzy Dean put out of action in the simple act of reaching for a telephone—or something.

Last Sunday Eddie Miller, of the Boston Bees, broke his leg. The following day Lou Chiozza and Joe Shaute, two New York Giants, collided and the former was removed to a hospital with a double leg fracture. On the same day Joe Cronin, manager of the Boston Red Sox, crashed into Pinkey Higgins, Detroit, at second base. Both were knocked unconscious.

In the recent Dream Game, Ival Goodman, star Cincinnati outfielder, tried to make a shoestring catch and is out of the game with a damaged shoulder. Brooklyn lost the services of Art Parks when that player broke his ankle, and there are several others playing with split fingers, etc., who should be on the bench.

If collisions on the gridiron were as disastrous as those on the diamond the football season would be over long before Thanksgiving Day for the very good reason that all players would be in hospitals. Why is violent body contact more damaging in baseball than it is in football?

The Old Sport put the question to Bert Bell, owner and coach of the Eagles, whose explanation seems adequate.

"It is all a matter of being prepared for a shock," said Bell. "Baseball players are not so prepared, and are frequently injured; football players are prepared, they are braced for a shock, and are seldom hurt. Furthermore, because football is primarily a game of body contact, players are hardened and part of their training is learning how to fall.

"Even so, if a football player is hit hard when relaxed he is very often put out of action. That is what happened to Jim Connell in the Penn State-Penn game last season. He was down on one knee, which is legally 'down' in intercollegiate Football, and wasn't prepared for the shock that came when he was hit by a Penn State player who couldn't seem to stop his charge."

Bell paused to pick up a newspaper clipping from his desk and shoved it at the Old Sport with something between a laugh and a snort.

"I don't know who gave out that story about officials being required to run testing 50- and 100-yard dashes when the National Football League meets this week-end in Pittsburgh, but it's a laugh to me," commented Bert. "Somebody must have had a brain-storm.

"Officials must be fast on their feet, of course, and able to show speed over short yards," continued the boss of the Birds. "But a hundred yards—that's silly. A man might officiate in a couple of hundred games without being called upon to run the entire length of the field at top speed.

"National League officials must pass a physical test, particularly as to the condition of the heart and vision. But we are not conducting track meets."

Bell might have added that physical condition and speed afoot is a comparatively small part of a successful official's equipment. The prime requisite is intuition, which enables an official to be on the right spot at the right time. Ability to size up a play in a hurry is more important than being able to run 100 yards in ten seconds.

It would be absurd, unfair and even dangerous to ask football officials to run 100 or even 50 yards at top speed in mid-summer—just as ridiculous as asking a baseball pitcher to toss off a game in mid-winter. Practically all officials are business or professional men, whose exercise, except in the fall, is limited to golf or pit-pat tennis.

During a discussion concerning physical condition and its relation to football officiating, a veteran who has been in action many years remarked to the Old Sport:

"I play a lot of golf and keep myself in shape the year round, but if anyone asked me to run 100 yards right now, I would hesitate. After a few games I suppose I could do it with little difficulty, but I don't anticipate being called upon to do such a thing this year, or next year, or any other year."

It is a mistaken idea that running long distances are more of a strain on the heart than the the dashes. Take a jog around the block some time and see how much easier it is than sprinting 50 yards to catch a trolley car. But don't try either unless you are in better than average physical condition and under middle age.

After all, running is for runners, and unless one is in training, it becomes as dangerous as any form of exercise when overdone.

Phila. Crews Leave Today For Nationals

50 Oarsmen, Officials Depart for Detroit; Burk Already on Way

Fifty Philadelphia oarsmen, coaches and rowing officials leave from the Baltimore and Ohio Station at 11.17 A. M. today for the 67th annual national championship regatta which will be held Friday and Saturday at Detroit.

Joe Burk, Diamond sculls champion, just back from England where he took the classic trophy for the second straight year, is not in the party. Joe, with his brother Jim, left by automobile yesterday, with their single shells tied to the top. Joe will defend his national singles title in the meet, while Jim is entered in the association singles. After competing at Detroit, they will proceed to St. Catharines, Canada, where Joe will defend the Canadian single title, and Jim will again enter the association singles.

FIVE CLUBS TO ROW

Oarsmen representing five clubs are in the party to Detroit this morning. Penn Athletic Club leads with 26 oarsmen; Undine has 10; Malta, six; Fairmount, five, and Bachman Barge, two.

The regatta will be held in two parts, with the first day's races starting at 2 P. M. (E. D. T.) on Friday and 3.30 P. M. Saturday. Races both days are to be broadcast over a national radio hook-up.

The Phila. entries:

Penn A. C.—Jerome Richards, Joseph Ganson, Anthony Gallagher, George McGee (captain); Bond Spencer, George Frantzen, Thomas Cripps, Ellis Barnes, Frank Champion, Art Shaw, Howard D. Mogford, Fred Pyle, Art Shaw, Howard D. Mogford, Frank English, Charles Ford, Lewis Krumbhaar, John Lavery, James Lynch, Thomas Mahon, Robert A. Wilson, Fred H. Speer, W. Lewis Tivin (captain), Charles H. Cochrane, Harold Finigan, Victor E. Lindroe.

Undine—John Lacey, Joseph Andrews, Edward Vorneiser, John Ballentine, James Ballentine, Howard Hugger, Gerard Gallagher, George Price, William Campbell, Wesley Fairbanks.

Bachman Barge Club—Walter H. Pfaumann, Arthur Bachman.

Officials—Benjamin Penn, Bunn, president; N. A. A. C.; Charles Salinger, treasurer N. A. A. C.; Franklin Bates, secretary N. A. A. C.; Frank Hall, committee; Kenneth Mack, Charles Dwight Sargent, committee; Joseph Berry, Penn A. C. rowing committee; Clement B. Newbold, executive committee N. A. A. C.

Owen Scores Net Upset

Blaine, Rifle Club, 6-1, 6-3. Defeating Champion Jones Cornell coach Edwin Schatkowski, another of the home talent stars, 6-2, 6-4. Quinn breezed by Paul Empie, Germantown Cricket Club, 6-1, 6-1.

Chuck Harden came from 6-3 in the first set to conquer Art Condon, Valley Lane, 6-4, 6-2. Malcolm Weinstein, Penn State collegian, set aside Frank Dunham, Marlyn T. C., 6-3, 6-2. E. Foster Hammonds, advanced to the third round on Monday.

Tom Foley, tourney chairman, lost to Preston Herbst, Germantown C. C., in a postponed first-round match that was halted by darkness on Monday. The pair resumed play in the third set, Herbst winning by the scores 4-6, 8-6, 6-2. Herbst faded out when he met up with Ed Smoker, 100-yard dashes when the National Football League meets this week-end in Pittsburgh, "but it's a laugh to me," commented Bert. "Somebody must have had a brain-storm."

"Officials must be fast on their feet, of course, and able to show speed over short yards," continued the boss of the Birds. "But a hundred yards—that's silly. A man might officiate in a couple of hundred games without being called upon to run the entire length of the field at top speed.

hand in winning the Philadelphia Amateur-Pro crown three weeks ago, took the silver plate for the new amateur score with a total of 315.

Byrd, to whom victory was worth $200, had never won a pro tournament, although he finished second to E. J. (Dutch) Harrison in the San Antonio Open last winter.

Sam, 31, has been Dudley's assistant at Spring Mill three years and this was his third open.

Sammy got off to a miserable start at Flourtown with a 76. He was never over par after that. He came down to 79 in the second round and had a 71 yesterday morning.

GOLF MASTERPIECE

Byrd's final fling was a masterpiece. He averaged 360 yards on his drives, hit his irons brilliantly, and finally tamed a rebellious putter. Sam's hardies on the front nine were at the 1st, 4th, and 5th. At the 3d and 9th he missed six-footers for birds.

Dudley scored his 68 at Flourtown in 1933, when he won the Philly open with 288....Ed is the only pro in the modern era to win it three times, an achievement Turner was attempting to duplicate....Big Ed, who finished out of the money with 290, left at midnight for the West to play in the Western and St. Paul Open tournaments.

At the prize presentation ceremonies, big Ed suggested that the tournament be cut to 36 holes next year....It is likely that his suggestion will be followed, in the hope of attracting a bigger field....It has been 72 holes for the last score of years except in 1931.

Diegel, after hitting a poor approach shot at the 17th threw his iron into a tree over head....It stuck in the branches....He threw another ....the first came down, but the second stuck....Then his caddie shook the tree and got the club.

Dunn Leads Net Field at Shore

OCEAN CITY, N. J., July 14—George B. Dunn, of Plymouth C. C., the first-seeded player, paced the favorites into the quarter finals of the Atlantic Coast men's champion ships but he was accompanied by three unranked players at the Ocean City Tennis Club today.

Not until a heated combat with Harvey Y. Lake, Ocean City veteran, was pulled out of the fire did Dunn earn his round of berth. The scores were 8-6, 6-4, and in each set Lake held a temporary lead.

Frank Baxter, of Cynwyd, by defeating A. B. Orthwein, St. Louis, Mo., 6-1, 6-3. Harry Hackett, Marlyn, by conquering Scott Adams, Ocean City, 6-3, 6-1, and Holmes Cathrall, 16-year-old Scranton lad, by crushing J. J. Lacy, Baltimore, Md. 6-0, 6-1, all joined Dunn in the quarters. Baxter and Hackett play tomorrow but rivals for the other two have not been determined yet.

Rose Hofkin, Philadelphia; Jean Harshaw, Isle Hour, and Ruth Vallentin, Penn A. C., seeded one, three and four, respectively, in the women's tournament, all won second-round matches with ease.

Germantown Wins Dual Track Meet

Germantown Combined defeated Mill Creek in a dual track and field meet last night at 49th and Brown sts. The score was 52 to 11.

LeRoy McCloud, who won the 100-yard dash in 10.3 seconds and the 220 in 0.24:1; Norman Gordan, Penn State runner, who took the half-mile in 2.08 and the mile in 4.44, and Howard Jensen, ex-Temple athlete, who high jumped 6 feet 3 inches, paced the Germantown team.

George VanTassington, who broad jumped 21 feet 9 inches, and Joe Mullen, who ran 440 yards in 0.54, were Mill Creek winners.

Provident Jolts Central Penn, 14-10

Central Penn, which meets Corn Exchange in the Pennsylvania League championship on Thursday, suffered a 14-10 defeat at the hands of the Provident P. C. at 44th st. and Parkside ave., last night.

Provident pounded three Central twirlers for 13 hits and sewed up the game at the end of the third when they led by a 13 to 6 count. Rodney McGrail, in six trips to the plate for Provident, drew four walks, clouted a homer and triple, and scored five times. Ed Weller led the attack with three singles.

Conn Bout Set For Shibe Park

Billy Conn and Gus Dorazio, signed on Monday by Herman Taylor for a 10-round bout on Aug. 14, will fight at Shibe Park, the lights installed by the Athletics for their "day-in-night" baseball games, it was announced yesterday.

Negotiations were completed at that time between the ringmaster and Roy Mack, vice president of the A's, for the use of the park.

This will be the first time in which a night baseball park has been staged without lights over the ring. The Athletics, generally conceded to be the finest in the ball yards, will illuminate the premises better than the conventional systems at fight sites.

Taylor, who will stage the bout in partnership with Mike Jacobs, yesterday announced the rules for sealing the customers. He will set up the ring at the pitcher's box, and place seats on all the A's lawn. These seats, as well as the boxes, will cost the carriage trade $3.00; centre stands will bring smaller prices, while the east and west wings—left and right fields—will take care of the general admission.

The centre field stand, that used by the Athletics for the bleacher fans, will not be opened.

With fight signed, site secured and other details settled, Taylor will now give his undivided attention to the Tony Galento-Lou Nova heavyweight match which probably will be clinched tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock when fighters' managers and promoters meet with the boxing commissioners at the State Athletic Commission office here.

Parr, Andrews Cycle Victors

Jack Parr, diminutive driver from Newark, N. J., thrilled 800 spectators at the Yellowjacket Speedway last night when he staged several close finishes and took four of the six races in which he started and came in second in the other two, in the first of the weekly motorcycle races.

Ralph Andrews, of Brooklyn, however, won top honors by taking both first places in the scratch and handicap events, the main events.

the body often had Devlin colding to avoid further exposure to this violence.

Danny charged at times with his old fury. Sometimes he bombed Padlo with a whistling left hook. Most of the time, however, he was driven to cover when Mayon, beaten only once in commercial clouting, settled down to steady, if unspectacular gunning.

Padlo weighed 148 pounds, with Devlin a pound and a half heavier.

BUFFALO SURPRISE LOSER

Harvey Massey, a tan thumper from Brooklyn, who deals in the unexpected, whacked out a stunning triumph over Gene Buffalo, eccentric Philly Negro, who was a 3½ to 1 favorite at ringside. It was Buffalo Stick Gene's first defeat in a hometown ring in more than a year.

Not only did Massey, who recently surprised Tony Cisco here, win five rounds of this six-round semi-windup final bout, but he also smashed the Buff so violently with a right-left volley to the head in the second that Gene was on the boards for Referee Tommy O'Keefe's count of seven. Buffalo was never quite the same after that.

WOLGAST LOSES

Once an Astaire of the prize ring, ancient Midget Wolgast sustained a technical knockout defeat when he twisted his right ankle in an unhappy landing in the fifth round of his scheduled eighter with Billy Mims, a sharpshooting Negro youth. The time was 1.58.

Wolgast, one-time flyweight king but now 136½ pounds of beef, was off balance when Mims, flying him with a glancing right upon the shin in the fifth. Down went the Midget, ankle twisted beneath him and injured so painfully he couldn't go on.

Until that point the veteran had skipped and slapped and almost held his own with Mims, a North Philly lad who beamed 140½.

LIGHTNING EXTINGUISHED

Lightning did not strike twice in one spot. In fact, Lightning—last name Holiday—fell under Army Rule, left hook to the body in the second round. Rullo, kayoed by the dark Holiday in their previous meeting, weighed 161½; the Negro, who was counted out by Referee Matt Adgie after sampling Rullo's hook, was a pound lighter.

In the other prelims Al Mackie, 160, knocked out Bobby O'Keefe, 159½, in the first round, Frankie Ballentino, 119, and Gene Kirk, 122½, fought to a four-round draw, ry Dee and Ronald Edwards, both of San Francisco.

After the singles action ended, Maks and Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., who have high hopes of gaining the Davis Cup doubles assignment, shared the spotlight with Quist and Crawford, both of those outstanding pairs gaining the second round of the team competition in easy fashion.

TRUE TO FORM

The first two rounds in the women's section of the Bowl singles ran true to form, although first-seeded Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., had a few uneasy moments before she out-battled stubborn Elizabeth Blackman, of Detroit, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3, in a second-round match.

The other three ranking players accompanying her into the round of 16 were Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco; Katherine Winthrop, of Boston, and Helen Bernhard, of New York, the 1938 winner.

Miss Wolfenden turned back two New England rivals, Peggy Balan, of Worcester, 6-2, 6-2, and Polly Morrill, of Dedham, 6-1, 6-3.

Miss Winthrop gained the third round by defeating Mrs. Carleton Wardley, of Brookline, 6-3, 6-0, and Miss Bernhard overwhelmed Doris Love, of Boston, 6-0, 6-0.

Frank Expected to Provide Line Power for All-Stars

By STAN BAUMGARTNER

JOE FRANK

The "Key Man" in Georgetown's undefeated and untied football team last fall was Joe Frank, 210-pound tackle from the Bronx, New York.

A veritable wall against which all attacks broke down, Frank made a name for himself with every team that Georgetown played last season.

Against Temple University at the Owl Stadium he was practically an entire line. He not only halted all drives at his sector, but intercepted a pass and ran 45 yards to set up the second Georgetown touchdown.

We hope he can do as much against the Eagles when he faces them at the Temple Stadium on Aug. 22. Bert Bell, boss of the Eagles, thinks well of the youngster and has offered him a professional contract.

If Frank decides to pitch his tent with the Bellmen he will still play for the All-Stars when they clash. It was upon Coach Hagerty's recommendation that Bell became interested in Frank.

During the 1937 and '38 seasons he was All-District and All-Catholic All-American. He received honorable mention on the All-Eastern eleven and was mid on practically every All-Opponent team.

Frank is fast for a big man and played guard on the basketball team as well as trying his hand at intramural baseball. During the summer months he managed to keep busy working at the Belmont race track.
